CASE NONSUITED

Local Cotton Oil Company Quits Prosecution of Tank Car Line.
The suit of the Richmond Cotton Oil Company against the German-American Car Company, alleging discrimination against the local concern by failure to fill a contract for tank cars, was nonsuited at the request of the plaintiff yesterday morning when called for trial in the United States District Court. Attorneys for the parties to the suit came to an agreement outside of court. The Richmond Cotton Oil Company set forth that by neglecting to supply it with three tank cars on a specified date last fail the German-American Car Company caused the plaintiff serious financial loss, injured its standing among competitors and prevented it from delivering orders.
